

Field Research in Political Science: Theories, Patterns, and Experiential Learning in Kenya

This course will combine political science field research methods and the study of governments and politics in Kenya. Students will design a field research project from start to finish including human subjects review, interview techniques, coding, questionnaire designs, measurements, data management, and data analysis. The course will also cover major themes of contemporary Kenyan politics. During the travel portion of the course, students will field their own research in Kenya.

Program Details

May 2019

Kenya

Course Credit: PLSC 510; AAMS 390

TBD

Program Highlights

Collaborate with the local survey research team at Strathmore University

Explore Maasai Mara, Nakuru, and Aberdare on day and night game drives

View the snow capped peak of Mt. Kenya from Mount Kenya Safari Club, located on the equator

For more information, contact Professor Hye-Sung Kim

kimh@winthrop.edu

